Subject Compilations of State Laws

Quick Reference Guide

Subject Compilations of State Laws has long been recognized as the most comprehensive source for identifying thousands of articles, books, government publications, loose-leaf titles, court opinions, and websites that compare state laws on hundreds of subjects. The first volume, which was compiled by Lynn Foster and Carol Boast, won the AALL Joseph L. Andrews Bibliographical Award in 1982. The print version is typically updated annually, with the database updated more frequently throughout the year.

The Subject Compilations of State Laws database won the coveted AALL Best New Product Award in 2009. Easily browse hundreds of subjects, or perform topical research across more than 25,000 bibliographical records.

Courts and Cases

In addition to standard search fields such as article or journal title and article author, search for specific cases using the cases and court fields. Courts are indexed when a published court decision includes a 50-state survey or when a brief or petition for review includes a 50-state survey. For example, search for New Jersey Superior Court.

It's also possible to search for case titles. Change the drop-down field to Cases, and enter Renna v. County of Union to retrieve the case entry and view its relationship to state regulations.

NOTE: Case law is available in HeinOnline via our partnership with Fastcase. Click case citations to access the full text of state and federal cases without leaving HeinOnline!

3. Other Database Features

OCCL Linking

OCCL numbers link directly to WorldCat records when the OCCL number is available in the record. For example, search the entry number field for 5632.02. Click the OCCL number from the record to view the title's WorldCat entry, and to find a nearby library that has the title available.

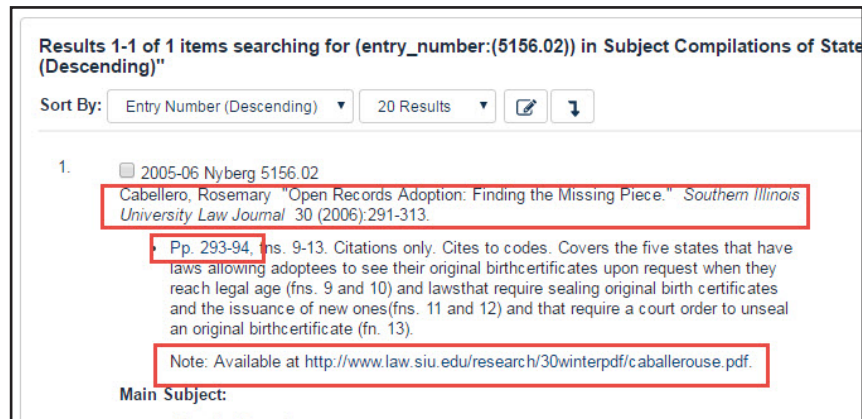

Links to Other Database Entries

Some entries also contain links to other entries within the Subject Compilations of State Laws database. This is helpful when researching how laws have changed. For instance, entry number 5088.01 has links to three earlier years which reference the same survey.
