ABOUT THE DATABASE

HeinOnline's GAO Reports and Comptroller General Decisions database contains reports on audits, surveys, investigations, and evaluations of federal programs conducted by the United States Government Accountability Office (GAO). All published reports, testimonies, correspondence, and special publications are included (products that are restricted or classified are not). GAO Comptroller General Decisions contain decisions and opinions issued by the Comptroller General in areas of federal law such as appropriations, bid protests, and federal agency rulemaking.

The Government Publishing Office (GPO) has a partnership agreement with the GAO to provide permanent public access to these documents on the GAO website, but HeinOnline's metadata indexing, plus its fully searchable, user-friendly interface, make it simple to browse and search this content.

ABOUT THE GAO

Headed by the Comptroller General of the U.S., the Government Accountability Office (GAO) is a legislative branch agency which provides auditing, evaluation, and investigative services for the United States Congress. Formerly known as the Government Accounting Office, the GAO was established by the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921. This Act required the GAO to "investigate, at the seat of government or elsewhere, all matters related to the receipt, disbursement, and application of public funds, and shall make to the President and to Congress reports and recommendations looking to greater economy of efficiency in public expenditures."

The GAO produces:

- Reports and written correspondence
- Testimonies and statements for the record
- Briefings for congressional staff members
- Legal decisions and opinions resolving bid protests and addressing issues of appropriations law

The GAO also possesses certain powers, including:

- Auditing agency operations to determine if federal funds are being spent efficiently and effectively
- Investigating allegations of illegal and improper activities
- Reporting on effectiveness of government programs and policies
- Performing policy analyses
- Outlining options for congressional consideration
- Issuing legal decisions and opinions advising Congress and executive agencies on government effectiveness and efficiency

It is important to note that the National Bankruptcy Review Commission concluded that there is a general lack of reliable, accurate data on the bankruptcy system, and the data that are available are splintered among several central reporting agencies and the 94 bankruptcy districts. ...WEFA relied on data that it believed would reasonably approximate actual debt levels, debt repayments, and bankruptcy system costs for those debtors who filed for bankruptcy under chapter 7 or chapter 13 of the bankruptcy code in 1997. ...Second, the sample of bankruptcy debtors used to develop the national debt estimates came from only 3 (chapter 13) or 4 (chapter 7) of the more than 180 bankruptcy court locations. ...Third, the sample of bankruptcy petitions filed in various periods in 1991, 1992, and 1993. ...This is because debt profiles of those who filed for bankruptcy under chapter 7 and chapter 13 in 1997 may be different from the profiles of the debtors who filed for bankruptcy in 1991, 1992 or 1993. ...GAO/IGD-98-116R The Financial Costs of Personal Bankruptcy #12.

2. Bankruptcy: Judiciary Should Take Further Steps To Make Bankruptcy Data More Accessible [GAO-09-28]
December 18, 2008
Topics: Bankruptcy Law
Turn to page
The procedural aspects of the bankruptcy process are governed by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (Bankruptcy Rules) and local rules of each bankruptcy court. The Bankruptcy Rules contain a set of official forms for use in bankruptcy cases. The document filed by the debtor to open a bankruptcy case is known as the voluntary petition, which the debtor may amend (make changes to) at any time before the case is closed. ...Most documents associated with bankruptcy cases are public records and, with certain exceptions, the information contained in a bankruptcy file is publicly accessible. ...The act made substantial changes to the Bankruptcy Code, significantly changing consumer bankruptcy practice. It also sought to address, at least in part, long-standing concerns about perceived shortcomings of the bankruptcy data system that had been identified by the National Bankruptcy Review Commission and other parties. ...It also required the Attorney General (who delegated the authority to the Trustee Program) to GAO-09-28 Bankruptcy Data (Bankruptcy cases in Alabama and North Carolina are not under the jurisdiction of the Trustee Program; instead, bankruptcy administrators within the judicial branch administer the cases in the judicial districts in those states).
