

Law Journal Library

Includes nearly 2,900 law and law-related periodicals from inception.

Academic journals provide a wealth of information regarding law and law-related issues, as well as in-depth analyses of important legal decisions. Unlike other online databases, HeinOnline's Law Journal Library is comprehensive, beginning with the first issue ever published of nearly 2,900 law and law-related periodicals. With more than 39 million pages of articles, comments, notes, book reviews, cases, decisions, and legislation, HeinOnline's Law Journal Library bridges an important research gap.

The Law Journal Library contains legal periodicals covering more than 100 subject areas which are published in sixty different countries, as well as all fifty U.S. states and the District of Columbia. One of the most advantageous features of HeinOnline is that it is an image-based database, which means it provides exact page images as they originally appear in hard copy. Therefore, all charts, graphs, photographs and footnotes appear where they belong!

With a variety of searching options and the integration of Hein's ScholarCheck, More Like This, Topics and Entities, and Venn Diagram Search, database is a welcome addition in any academic setting.

Artificial Intelligence Searching

Natural language processing and machine learning tools have been released in the Law Journal Library and select other databases: More Like This, Topics and Entities, and Keyword Search Builder.

More Like This

When viewing an article, the More Like This tool uses a program to pull out “interesting words” as determined by an algorithm. Users are provided with a list of similar articles based on the interesting words. Adjust the boost factors of the interesting words, add a new term, or select a date range to modify the search results.

or officials all suspected cases of child abuse or neglect which come to their attention.¹ All of these laws were enacted in the four-year period between 1963 and 1967, a time when the nation first began looking at the serious national problem of child abuse and seeking ways to solve it.² Since their enactment, most of these laws have been expanded and strengthened, partly due to the compulsion of a federal statute, enacted in 1974, which provides that a state must have a child abuse reporting law in place in order to qualify for federal child abuse prevention and treatment funds.³

Indexing of “Not Currently Available” in HeinOnline

HeinOnline indexes the recent issues of several journals whose content is not currently available in the Law Journal Library. By indexing this content, users can search and browse the title, author and abstract information for articles within the volumes that are not yet available in full text within HeinOnline.

For those results where the full-text is not currently available, a light red box will appear and indicate “Full Text Not Currently Available”.

Click on the article name to view HeinOnline’s coverage, the publisher’s information, and a link to the publisher’s website. Set up ISSN/ISBN or OpenURL linking through our Branding Program (learn more here: <http://home.heinonline.org/branding/>) which gives users the ability to find the article or journal within another source in their library other than HeinOnline.
