

HeinOnline Integrates with ORCID

January 27, 2020. HeinOnline, a product of William S. Hein & Co., Inc. has integrated with ORCID, enabling authors of legal publications to connect their ORCID iD with their Author Profile from within the HeinOnline platform.

ORCID (Open Researcher & Contributor Identifier) provides unique, persistent identifiers (ORCID iDs) for individuals to distinguish between researchers and to connect them with their works, contributions, and organizational affiliations. ORCID is especially relevant in the law scholarship landscape as US News prepares to rank US law schools based on scholarly impact, using citation data from HeinOnline. Linking a HeinOnline Author Profile Page to an ORCID account will aid law scholars and their affiliated institutions in receiving accurate attribution for their contributions to the field, and also allows authors to display HeinOnline works on their ORCID record.

Shane Marmion, President of William S. Hein & Co., Inc., says: "HeinOnline is excited to join forces with ORCID to unveil this new integration within our Author Profile Pages. ORCID's ability to provide unique identifiers makes a great fit for our premier research platform, which contains the works of hundreds of thousands of authors. The integration will streamline the process of identifying authors who publish under multiple name variations by connecting them to their affiliated works. Additionally, authors with scholarly works found outside of HeinOnline will be able to use their ORCID account as a gateway to showcase this content in their Author Profile Page."

Laure Haak, ORCID's Executive Director, says: "ORCID is an open resource for the entire research and scholarly community. We are excited to be supporting the legal field and look forward to ongoing collaborations to ensure that legal scholars can represent their work in an inclusive and transparent manner."
