USING THE DATABASE

Selecting a State

The main landing page of State Constitutions Illustrated will bring users to a map view. To start your research, either stretch your geographical know-how and click the desired state on the map, or select the state name from the drop-down menu. Wondering about those black numbers on the map? The numbers and color coding denote the boundaries of the United States Courts of Appeals and United States District Courts.

(Note: U.S. territories that are part of these districts are not included on this map).

Searching a State

Within each state, users can expand each section to view constitutions with their amendments, original text, and other related documents. Links to scholarly articles are also available.

ABOUT THE EDITOR

Jefri Jay Ruchti provided his editorial guidance to help develop State Constitutions Illustrated. Named for John Jay, the first Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, Ruchti was born in Montreal, Canada, in 1949. He attended the University of Wisconsin, as had his grandfather, father, and brother, and also attended the University of Chicago. Ruchti began actively collecting the texts of historical and current constitutions in 1984, becoming an editor and translator under the mentorship of Gisbert H. Flanz (1916-2015), founding editor of Constitutions of the Countries of the World.

In addition to his academic work with constitutions, Ruchti has pursued an independent career as an artist, working primarily in dry media on Japanese paper, exhibiting his work widely in the United States. He lives with his wife, Leigh Whiteman, in Guilford, Connecticut.

"The State Constitutions Illustrated database is a treasure trove of information on constitutional histories. It has a clean, simple interface that allows the user to find primary documentation about how the United States acquired each state in the union."
